

The Sculpture Park features the 10' x 10' room alongside various planar elements, arranged as an art installation intended to immerse patrons in the Sun's dynamic effects.

1. A depressed base plane with a central sundial, surrounded by rising planes of colored glass that correspond to time of day.
2. An overhead rain basin with a lounging bench below, allowing sunlight to pass through the water and highlight the sun's energy.
3. A pergola with overhead and enclosing planes of varying colors and transparency. Darker planes absorb sunlight, increasing warmth, while lighter planes filter light dynamically.
